ABOUT

Based in Bolton, Ontario, Canada, Omori North America has been a leading supplier and distributor of packaging machines, materials, and consumables for over 30 years.

Omori North America sells, installs, and services packaging machines made by Omori Japan and customises them for the North American market. Omori North America also provides padding tray services at its manufacturing facility, wherein products like ground beef, steak, and chicken are placed on the padded trays, wrapped in plastic, and labeled with date codes.

In addition, Omori North America sells refurbished equipment and original equipment parts and offers 24/7 after-sales service. Its customers range from small, entrepreneurial mushroom companies to poultry giants.

Out with the Old, In with the New

An operation of this size requires robust technology—but Omori North America hadn't updated its software in 25 years.

The company relied on workarounds, manual processes, and spreadsheets. And because its legacy system only used Canadian currency, staff had to duplicate invoices to do the exchange rate for US dollars and Japanese yen.

Distribution Runs Best With ERP

Don and his colleague, Jun Takizawa, were tasked with finding an enterprise resource planning (ERP) solution that would grow with the company.

The duo relied on advice from an IT consultant and acquaintances at similar-sized businesses. Based on the consultant's feedback, they didn't consider a newer version of the legacy system, and they rejected a well-known ERP solution because it didn't offer on-premises deployment.

Don and Jun narrowed their choices to three ERP solutions.

"We discussed the options, looked at costs, and showed our staff demonstrations," Don says.

We discussed the options, looked at costs, and showed our staff demonstrations. SAP Business One was the perfect fit.

The Right-Sized Solution

The team felt one solution's technology was outdated and wouldn't be scalable. The second option was more than the company needed.

SAP Business One was the perfect fit.

"SAP Business One has the functionality and dynamics we need, but it's easier for our team," Don says. "And I worked with SAP at a different company, so I know ERP is all SAP does."

The right partner is as critical as the right technology, and Omori North America chose Vision33, SAP's largest and most experienced SAP Business One partner, to implement its ERP solution.

"Vision33 has a location in Mississauga," Don notes. "They're a large, worldwide company but we appreciate their local, Canadian presence."

We put our lot numbers in SAP Business One. During our last surprise audit, the mock recall was done in 5-10 minutes. It was so quick and easy. It was amazing.”

Smoother Processes

Don, Jun, and their team are still discovering everything SAP Business One can do, but they've already saved significant time and energy.

“SAP Business One automates manual tasks,” Don explains. “For example, we can automatically email invoices from the system.”

Omori North America is food-safety certified, which means traceability is critical. The company didn't use its previous software's lot number and batch number functionality, so staff spent hours shuffling through paper files when an auditor conducted a mock recall.

The Future Looks Bright

As Omori North America continues to break in its new ERP solution, the company has an industry-leading support program at its disposal. Vision33's TOTAL Care provides the most value for SAP Business One customers through ongoing support, training, and enablement programs.

"TOTAL Care is excellent," Don says. "Vision33's helpful, knowledgeable staff are quick to respond, 24/7."

Eventually, Omori North America plans to add a warehouse management solution (WMS) and barcoding to SAP Business One.

And now that Omori North America is running more efficiently with a powerful, scalable ERP solution, the company can focus on its relentless dedication to customer service.
